

TREES THAT COUNT TE RAHI O TĀNE

WHAT KIND OF TREES COUNT?

Trees That Count is keeping a live count of native tree planting activity in Aotearoa so we can measure our collective impact on climate change. It's about planting trees that count – for regenerating our environment, for enhancing biodiversity, and for the enjoyment and well-being of future generations.

TREES THAT COUNT FOR OUR ENVIRONMENT:

1. Native – trees and shrubs indigenous to New Zealand
2. Have the potential to reach a minimum height of 5 metres at maturity
3. Planted with the intention of being maintained and managed until maturity.

WHAT TYPES OF TREES ARE INCLUDED?

We've split commonly planted species for establishing native forest that meet the Trees That Count criteria into two broad categories:

- Trees – species that are often the long-lived tall trees that dominate the canopy of mature forest; and
- Shrubs/small trees – species that are either shorter-lived pioneers or small trees that occur as an understorey in mature forest.

There are other native trees and shrubs that will comply with Trees That Count's criteria. For any species not on our master list (listed in this document), the New Zealand Plant Conservation Network has an online plant identification database that gives height ranges for most natives to determine which species will comply.
